AIKEN COUNTY HISTORICAL MUSEUM

433 Newberry St SW; Aiken, SC 29801

The parents of Carley Rae McMaster, Scott & Vindi McMaster of Aiken, South Carolina, established "Carley's Rays of Hope" in her loving memory. Carley was diagnosed in November 2005 with an Ependymoma brain tumor, just one month shy of her 8th birthday. During her three-year fight, Carley possessed a spirited and deep compassion for others affected by cancer. Unfortunately, in December of 2008 Carley's battle with the brain tumor came to an end.

Established February 3, 2010 when her parents partnered with The Brain Tumor Foundation for Children, Inc., a 501c3 non-profit organization, Carley's Rays of Hope provides financial assistance, emotional and spiritual support as well as information to families of children in South Carolina with brain and spinal cord tumors. We hope to positively impact and raise awareness regarding the various childhood cancers affecting the brain and spinal cord, and advocate on behalf of children affected.

Aiken County Historical Museum

The Aiken County Historical Museum is located in downtown Aiken in the heart of the Winter Colony district. The museum houses a wide variety of collections relating to the history of Aiken County, from its earliest settlers to today. The museum's collection is kept in Banksia, which is a 1931 winter colony mansion. On this 3.5 acre property, visitors can also find the Egle Log House, built in 1808 and is one of the oldest buildings still standing in Aiken County.
